SHOW WILL BE A PERMANENT
ONE TO BOOST STATE.

In the balcony of the Keith-O'Brien store, amidst palms and flowers, the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Manufacturers & Merchants' association opened yesterday afternoon the exhibition of products manufactured in Utah. Everything from a pair of shoes to a mattress or a can of baking powder to a loaf of bread, is to be seen in the display. While the number of articles shown is not large, it is nearly complete for all the necessities of life and a few of the luxuries are to be seen.

The exhibition consists of not only food stuffs, but all manufactured articles produced in the state of Utah. Everything from a pair of shoes to a mattress or a can of baking powder to a loaf of bread, is to be seen in the display. While the number of articles shown is not large, it is nearly complete for all the necessities of life and a few of the luxuries are to be seen.

At the opening yesterday nearly a hundred new names were added to the membership rolls. Each member pledged herself to use in her household all articles it is possible to obtain in this state. All products made in Utah are to have the preference over those manufactured in other states.

It has been decided to place Mrs. Dolly Southard in charge of the exhibit. She will be present at all times during the day to explain to visitors the purposes of the auxiliary and incidentally "boost" western goods for western people. A three-mile course, the number dropping to ten, then five, then three, then one. Imagine this lone girl sprinting toward the finishing tape after three miles have been covered with the same unwavering speed. Above imagination? This is just what happened at the athletic contest conducted in the Madison Square Garden, New York, from Nov. 9 to 14, inclusive, 1905. Miss Marie Spitzner, who was in Salt Lake yesterday, was the one girl who crossed the tape after putting three miles behind her. Miss Spitzner lays claim to being the best all-around woman athlete in the world. She demonstrated this by winning every race run during the McFadden contest in Madison Square Garden. Miss Spitzner won also the medal in the contour contest. From forty-two fair contestants who posed, she was the one whom the judges decided was the most beautiful fully developed. Miss Spitzner was in Salt Lake yesterday while en route to California, where she will make her home in the future. She visited in this city with Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Thompson at 162 McClelland avenue.

CHAMPION WOMAN ATHLETE VISITS SALT LAKE

Miss Marie Spitzner, Who Has Won Many Prizes for Physical Feats and for Beauty of Figure, Is on Way to California.

Miss Marie Spitzner, in Two Poses.

Imagine a score or more pretty girls runners waiting nervously for the crack of the starter's pistol. Imagine those twenty girls leaping forward when the gun utters its short bark. Twenty girls speed over a three-mile course, the number dropping to ten, then five, then three, then one. Imagine this lone girl sprinting toward the finishing tape after three miles have been covered with the same unwavering speed. Above imagination? This is just what happened at the athletic contest conducted in the Madison Square Garden, New York, from Nov. 9 to 14, inclusive, 1905. Miss Marie Spitzner, who was in Salt Lake yesterday, was the one girl who crossed the tape after putting three miles behind her. Miss Spitzner lays claim to being the best all-around woman athlete in the world. She demonstrated this by winning every race run during the McFadden contest in Madison Square Garden. Miss Spitzner won also the medal in the contour contest. From forty-two fair contestants who posed, she was the one whom the judges decided was the most beautiful fully developed. Miss Spitzner was in Salt Lake yesterday while en route to California, where she will make her home in the future. She visited in this city with Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Thompson at 162 McClelland avenue.

she began to feel that if her days were numbered it was a large number. "The doctors may have been right when they told me I was going to die, but they were wrong when they said I would do so in six months—I am not dead yet," she said, laughingly.

Is All Around Athlete.

When Miss Spitzner commenced her dieting and training she weighed eighty-nine pounds. Now she weighs 137 pounds and can perform difficult feats of strength with little effort. She possesses by far few men athletes of years of training. When Bernard McFadden opened his beauty and athletic contest at Madison Square, women from all over the world entered the contests. Each state in the Union was represented by at least one fair contestant. Miss Spitzner won first prize in eight races during a week's show. She ran a race every day and on some days ran two races. Her endurance was considered marvelous by the thousands of spectators who filled the Garden every day during the exhibition. The judges awarded her nine prizes during the week. She won first prize in the fifty-yard dash, first prize in the 22-yard dash, first prize in the quarter-mile run, and first prize in the three-mile run. These gave her forty-six points out of a possible sixty. To her was awarded five first prizes in two special races also.

Took Medals Right and Left.

Miss Spitzner's forte is running. She has the endurance needed for long-distance running, and has it to a degree possessed by few men athletes of years of training. When Bernard McFadden opened his beauty and athletic contest at Madison Square, women from all over the world entered the contests. Each state in the Union was represented by at least one fair contestant. Miss Spitzner won first prize in eight races during a week's show. She ran a race every day and on some days ran two races. Her endurance was considered marvelous by the thousands of spectators who filled the Garden every day during the exhibition. The judges awarded her nine prizes during the week. These gave her forty-six points out of a possible sixty. To her was awarded five first prizes in two special races also.

Was Told She Would Die.

Miss Spitzner is a modest appearing young woman. She first began athletic training for her health. She is 19 years of age. About three years ago she was suffering from chronic sickness. The doctors shook their heads wisely and told her she had but six months to live, that she was entering the first stages of consumption. About this time A. G. Ryder, a physical culture enthusiast of New Haven, Miss Spitzner's birthplace, interested himself in the young woman and induced her to adopt certain exercises and live upon a certain diet. She followed these instructions half-heartedly for some time, feeling that her days were numbered. They were, but she improved under this training

The contour contest attracted the most attention. A huge revolving stand had been erected. This had niches built in it with pedestals erected in each niche. During the first half of the week several contests were conducted. Young women clad in white posed on the pedestals and as the stand revolved slowly the judges made awards to the most perfectly developed woman. Out of forty-two contestants who entered the contest but nineteen were left for the final contest held at the close of the week's programme. To Miss Spitzner was awarded first prize in this contest, and this added twenty points to the long list of merits already secured. She received sixty-six points out of a possible 100. The next highest competitor received forty-two points. Miss Spitzner won two medals, one gold and one silver, for special races for women and $300 in cash prizes. During the week the tremendous strain and excitement seemed to have no effect upon her. Each day she was ready for the day's events. During this time she ate raw eggs and grain foods. Long before the finish of the three-mile race her two most dangerous rivals were forced to leave the track. One girl fainted in the race and another fell to the ground utterly unable to take another step. Miss Spitzner electrified the crowd by striking a brisk run from the pop of the starter's gun and maintaining it until she crossed the tape, apparently as fresh as when she started. She even burst into a spasm of laughter when nearing the tape.

Eats No Meat Nor Flour Foods.

Miss Spitzner says she will continue her athletic training all her life, as she takes delight in keeping herself in the finest condition. Early in the game she fasted on fruit, vegetables and cereals and vegetables. She does not taste white flour products. Graham and whole wheat breads are also an important item of her daily fare.

Dr. George Edgar Vincent of the University of Chicago and of the Chautauqua institution will deliver a series of lectures at Barratt hall this week. One lecture will be delivered Thursday evening and others will be delivered Saturday afternoon and evening. Several teachers in the city schools are promoting the lectures.

The topics of his three lectures will be: "Children vs. Grown-Ups," "Democracy—Old Phases and a New Faith" and "The Larger Selfishness." Of the first lecture the advance notices say that it "is a plea for more intelligent insight into the lives and motives of the young, in order that parents and teachers may live with rather than lead it." The lecture on "Democracy" is announced to be "an attempt to find a new basis for a faith in the basal doctrines of democracy, now cynically questioned by many able and dominant citizens, who ridicule the fervid phrases of the fathers."

The lecture on "The Larger Selfishness" is described as a "discussion of a well known theme from the standpoint of a social self which includes other personalities."

PERSONAL.

Peter McCourt, the veteran manager of the Broadway and Tabor theatres in Denver, went through Salt Lake yesterday on his return from a vacation trip to the Hawaiian islands. He predicts that the so-called "Independents" in the theatre world, who build no theatre in Salt Lake, will build one in Denver or Salt Lake.

AMUSEMENTS

Salt Lake in general, and Liberty stake in particular, has many reasons to be proud of the bright boys and pretty girls who presented "The Witch of the Woods" at the Salt Lake theatre yesterday afternoon and last night. It was an entertainment that would have won praise from any discriminating audience. From an audience made up in great part of the parents, friends and relatives of the youthful performers, there could be nothing but enthusiastic encores. The loudest praise was won by the smallest performers. There was one tot about the size of a bunch of pansies, Leah Golette, who proved that children are natural-born actors, and that they "make believe" before they get out of their cradles. This little lady went through her parts like a veteran and convulsed the house on every appearance. A quartette of little chaps, Eugene Robinson, Arthur Nesten, Earl Davis and Arthur Woods, made as fine little cannibals as ever roamed in the jungles of the Fiji islands.

Under the management of Mrs. Harriet Purdy Smith and her assistants, the entertainment moved with few hitches. In this it differed from so many entertainments by home talent, especially where there are so many to take parts. It was said there were 300 on the stage during the performance. The music was all of the "catchy" kind. It had a swing to it that carried every listener with it; the dances, marches and posing were good. The pictures presented under the calcium lights were especially pretty.

Leading parts were taken by Jack McDonald, who won rounds of applause by his negro songs; A. O. Miller, who made as tough a looking tramp as ever started out to "See America first;" A. B. Braby, who appeared well in a number of songs; Edna Evans, who made an altogether charming old maid; Ivy Evans, who made as pretty a little Indian maiden as ever charmed the heart of a Hiawatha; Mrs. Harriet Smith, who in addition to having general supervision, played the part of the witch exceptionally well; W. C. Salt, J. K. Keddington, Jack Saunders, Alvin Keddington, Charles Groves and Bart Missetts, who took leading parts; and Misses Claire Braby, Ida Salt, Sarah Lindholm, Nora Michelson, Annie Salt, Bertha Bingham, H. C. Esterblom, Stella Angell, Eliza Thorup, Florence Symons, Ella McAllister, Isabelle McAllister, who made one of the big hits of the evening in their parol song and parade.

The entertainment is a musical extravaganza meaning nothing in particular, but affording wonderful facilities for songs, marches and ballets. Some of the features that seemed to strike the audience best were the song by the telephone girls, "Dolly, Why Don't You Grow," a song by the little tot, the Delmonico waiters, the Tararum Boys, "Who'll Buy My Violin?" "Roll Dem Eyes," "Black Angel," "In Timbuctoo," "I've Had My Own Way," Sousa girls and "Red Feather," an Indian song by Ivy Evans.

A good audience was present at the matinee, and at the evening entertainment the theatre was filled. Success crowned the undertaking, and all connected with it have reason to be proud of their accomplishment.

One would have little time to watch plots at the Lyric theatre during the engagement of the Baltimore Beauties even if a plot existed, for there is an abundance of pretty girls and costumes to keep one's attention fully occupied. The company opened yesterday afternoon for the regular run of one week, and will undoubtedly make a successful bid for popularity during its stay here.

Two farces and an excellent vaudeville olio are given. The playwright did not depend on the name alone for the first skit, "A Scotch Highball," to make it "go," but has introduced a number of catchy songs and ballets. "A Scotch Highball" is defined as a musical hodgepodge. That title about carries it. One of several good musical numbers in this farce is "Baby," by Margaret Baxter and her company. If Salt Lake had theatre-goers of the genius "Willie," this selection would be endorsed to death.

"A Busy Night" is the title of the second sketch. Some of the songs in this playlet are sung as well as they've been heard in Salt Lake in the past two or three years.

The vaudeville numbers include Martin and Maxellian, who present an entertaining series of illusions, and the Zarrow trio, bicyclists. He who would smile not should abstain from the Zarrowes. They are a big feature of a good show.

THE EDITOR

Explains How to Keep Up Mental and Physical Vigor.

A New Jersey editor writes: "I have indulged in improper food brought on a condition of nervous dyspepsia, nearly three years ago, so severe that I had to quit work entirely. I put myself on a strict regimen of Grape-Nuts food, with plenty of outdoor exercise and in a few months found my stomach so far restored that the process of digestion gave me pleasure instead of distress. I was able to resume my business, which is onerous, as I not only edit my own paper but also do a great deal of 'outside' writing.

"I find that the Grape-Nuts diet enables me to write with greater vigor than ever before, and without the feeling of brain-fog with which I used to be troubled. As to bodily vigor—I can and do walk miles every day without fatigue—a few squares used to weary me before I began to live on Grape-Nuts." Name given by Postum Co., East Creek, Mich.

There's a reason. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

NOT SEEKING AN INCREASE

Painters' Union Denies Rumor That It Will Demand Raise in Pay May 1.

Local union No. 77 of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers, has issued an official statement denying that it intends to ask an increase in the daily wages of its members to $4 a day after May. The statement says:

"No person or persons have been given any authority for making such a demand; how such a story could be circulated and even published is a mystery to the local union. It is false and misleading; it is an injustice to our union, to our bosses and to the public. "Our wages at present are $3.50 per day. When we wish to make a demand for an increase we will be glad to publish the same in an official manner."
